Hermeneutics and the Human Sciences

Hermeneutics, or the interpretation of texts, is a common methodological approach used in Human Science. Hermeneutic knowledge is an understanding of phenomena according to a particular context. Far from the Enlightenment ideal of objective, universal knowledge, the "science" of interpretation readily admits a certain relativism.

Dilthey's reflections on the human sciences, historical contextualization and hermeneutics influenced many subsequent thinkers such as Husserl, Heidegger, Cassirer, Gadamer and Ricoeur. Recently, there has been some attention given to the ways in which Dilthey's empirical approach to experience influenced Carnap in his early attempts to overcome metaphysics.

Wilhelm Dilthey (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

Human life is structured and carried out through meaningful action and symbolic expressions. Dilthey maintains that the intellectual tools of hermeneutics—the interpretation of meaningful texts—are suited to the interpretation of human action and history. The Formation of the Historical World in the Human Sciences takes the hermeneutic approach to understanding history a step further by exploring the idea of “objectification” – the specific ways in which persons establish their ...
