Carnival Rawi Hage

Rawi Hage's writing is dreamy, anarchist and historically rooted, irreverent, and lingers into magical realism -- his carnival existence, his flying carpet, Fly was born in a circus and his hard life landed him in a city we presume is Montreal, though he never names it, as a loner, a bibliophile, a solo-sex addict, and a taxi driver who cannot say no to a fare as long as he gets paid.

Book Review: Carnival, by Rawi Hage | National Post

In Carnival, internationally acclaimed author Rawi Hage takes us into the world of Fly, a taxi driver in a crime-ridden apocalyptic metropolis. Raised in the circus, the son of a golden-haired trapeze artist and a flying-carpet man, Fly sees everything, taking in all of the city's carnivalesque beauty and ugliness as he roves through its dizzying streets in his taxi.

Carnival: Amazon.ca: Hage, Rawi: Books

Carnival revels in the written word, with a lust that mirrors Fly's own, for both literature and life. Hage has a unique perspective on the immigrant experience, crafting characters and situations that are both foreign and quintessentially Western. It's about the journey, not the destination, and the book is a joy to read.
